Richard Jeziorny is an artist, freelance designer and the convenor of the Tuesday morning drawing group. He has a long involvement with workshops and teaching design at a tertiary level. He has broad experience of design of sets, costumes, props and puppets in dramatic theatre, musical theatre, large scale dance, opera and special events.

This art session aims to engage students in the creativity of papier mache. Participants will complete a puppet in the first session and dress it in the second session.

Each class involves lots of interaction and discussion . There will be plenty of time to enjoy what they learn.

All products used in each class are supplied, and each student can expect to complete the project.
